Dear Dr. Van Brunt,

It was my distinct pleasure to welcome you to Plaza College this past Wednesday, April 29th, 2009.

Plaza has a long and proud history of providing nontraditional learners access to higher education. By facilitating career successes for our student body, we continue to prepare a skilled workforce for the New York City and State professional spheres. Our ongoing dedication to the adult-student contingent means that effective classroom management and learner motivation represent two facets of education which are particularly important to Plaza.

The humanistic approach to interaction is something that we strive for in our daily efforts to lend the widest range of support to our learners. As such, hearing about your insightful experiences of challenging interpersonal counseling issues was immensely valuable to our team. Your engaging presentation will continue to hold lasting value and resonance for Plaza's faculty, staff, and administrators alike – who, because of your words, are already approaching their roles within the College with renewed humor, grace, and mercy.

With kindest regards,

Charles E. Callahan, III
Provost
