

Local schools track trouble via social media

Janel Davis and Eric Stirgus

9:13 a.m. Thursday, Feb. 15, 2018 Filed in AJC Homepage

AJC HOMEPAGE →

School shootings have become common occurrences in the U.S. Schools in metro Atlanta now have emergency plans, lock-and-barricade drills for students and teachers and metal detectors; police departments conduct live shooter training in schools, and schools are being proactive in looking for clues to troubled students.

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution did this story in 2015 after a college shooting in Oregon about how local school systems are moving from reactive training to proactive measures.

In an age when school-related shootings are not unusual, Georgia colleges and school systems are preparing for the worst.

[\[Watch\] Give Your Child a Jump Start With This College Savings Plan](#)

ADVERTISER CONTENT: Florida Prepaid

When Cobb County school police got a tip last week that a middle school student had threatened to "shoot up" a school the day after the Oregon college campus killings, they acted.

Officers went to the student's home to investigate. The student denied he made a threat. No weapons were found. No charges were filed.

In today's world, you have to take threats seriously, explained Ron Storey, the school district's chief of police. "You never know how it's going to turn out," he said.

And in a shift to technology, local schools have begun using social media, where most young people have a presence and share much of their lives, to pinpoint potential problems before they start.

Attackers sometimes lay out their plans --- or at least hint at them --- on popular social sites, such as Facebook, said Brian Van Brunt, president of the National Behavioral Intervention Team Association and author of "Ending Campus Violence: New Approaches to Prevention."

"We are seeing an increase in the type of media we have now where people are upping the ante," Van Brunt said.

A University of Georgia student was indicted in February (2015) for posting threats of violence last fall on the anonymous Yik Yak social media app. The student allegedly warned others at the school to stay away from UGA's Zell B. Miller Learning Center "if you want to live," and "I'm coming with an AK," in reference to an AK-47 assault rifle.

This week a 15-year-old Fairfield, Calif., high school student was arrested for a tweet, in which he was pictured holding a rifle and threatening to hurt people at his school. Colleges in Philadelphia were on high alert after an anonymous social media post on a message board warned of an attack on an unspecified campus in the area. In metro Atlanta, school officials stepped up security following unspecified social media threats of school violence related to the 9 /11 attacks.

A national study found school threats increased 158 percent during the first five months of the 2014 school year compared to the same period in 2013. Most of the increase in threats came via electronic devices and on social media. Threats posted on sites like Twitter, Facebook and Yik Yak accounted for 231, or 28 percent, of the 812 threats reviewed, the study says.

In DeKalb County a handful of employees sit in a darkened office tracking frequent searches by students or faculty on the district's wireless network. The district uses software that alerts watchers when someone uses words such as "gun," "kill" or "explosives."

"It's provided a proactive safety measure for our students," said Gary Brantley, DeKalb's chief information officer.

Like DeKalb, other schools are experimenting with social media monitoring. The Fulton County School District's smartphone app includes a way for people to anonymously send tips about threats. Two Kennesaw State University employees monitor social media chatter as part of their duties. Georgia State University uses management systems like Hootsuite to monitor social media conversations for threats or safety risks.

UGA is in its first year of using a location-based social media monitoring platform they are testing at special events and with the school's alert system. Using GPS coordinates, the system, costing about $4,000 a year, allows the school to place a virtual barrier around a particular location and monitor the social media chatter of people in the area attending the event. The "geofencing" system does allow UGA officials to monitor for key words, said Steve Harris, UGA's director of emergency preparedness, and to refute rumors that may be circulating about safety risks.

Georgia Tech chose not to discuss with The Atlanta Journal-Constitution the work it is doing in this area.

There can be positive outcomes to the monitoring as well. Last week, the system may have saved a life after DeKalb learned a middle school student was doing searches about "how to kill myself." They notified the student's parents and the family is getting help.

School officials haven't abandoned traditional methods to secure campuses. Many are hiring more officers and installing surveillance cameras. Campus security has been tightened at some schools where visitors must use an intercom and buzzer system to gain entry. Colleges have implemented safety alert systems to quickly notify students of any danger, and schools at most every level have adopted active shooter protocols.

And the Oregon shooting reinforced the ongoing push by pro-gun advocates to allow school staffers and college students to carry guns on campus. Campus police at Georgia's public colleges do carry firearms, unlike officers on the campus in Oregon. And the General Assembly is expected to debate once more the aspect of opening up colleges to carrying guns.

For parents like Josh Evans, the additional security, whatever the method, is needed.

RELATED

Football coach who used body to shield students during Florida high school shooting dies

Evans' stepson, who attends Forsyth Central High School, left the school one day in August and returned later, and no one noticed, he said.

"What if a kid decided to get a gun?," Evans asked. "No one is paying attention."

---

FOLLOW THE STORY

Get AJC Education alerts delivered to your inbox.

SIGN UP

By providing my email address, I agree to receive messages related to this story and agree to the Privacy Policy

---

FOLLOW THE STORY

Get AJC Education alerts delivered to your inbox.

SIGN UP

By providing my email address, I agree to receive messages related to this story and agree to the Privacy Policy

---

VIEW COMMENTS 0 ▼

---

SIGN UP FOR E-NEWSLETTERS

Want more news?

Sign up for free e-newsletters to get more of AJC delivered to your inbox.

PROMOTED STORIES

Sponsored Links by Taboola

It's Like eBay, But Everything Sells in 90 Seconds.

Tophatter

15 Interracial Couples Breaking Barriers In Hollywood

Trend Chaser

Best Credit Cards For Balance Transfers in 2018

Compareacards.com By LendingTree

[Photos] Leave The Baby Alone With Dad And This Is What You Get

Give It Love

Born Before 1985? Government May Pay Off Your Mortgage in Florida

Fetcharate Quotes

Plastic Surgeon Reveals: "You Can Fill In Wrinkles At Home" (Here's How)

Beverly Hills MD

PROMOTED STORIES

Sponsored Links by Taboola

It's Like eBay, But Everything Sells in 90 Seconds.

Tophatter

15 Interracial Couples Breaking Barriers In Hollywood

Trend Chaser

Born Before 1985? Government May Pay Off Your Mortgage in Florida

Fetcharate Quotes

Best Credit Cards For Balance Transfers in 2018

Compareacards.com By LendingTree

How To: Boost Telomeres At Home

LCR Health

Plastic Surgeon Reveals: “You Can Fill In Wrinkles At Home” (Here’s How)

Beverly Hills MD

WEATHER AND TRAFFIC

52°
30303

MOST READ

1. Operation Slumber Party: 5 arrested in child sex sting in Georgia
2. Atlanta begins another college football tradition
3. Judge grants bond to Gwinnett man accused of rape, kidnapping

THINGS TO DO

Learn Special Effects Make Up Artistry!

Wed, Feb 28 10:45 am

Soft Opening: Be the FIRST to try Lucky Axe ...

Wed, Feb 28 12:00 pm

Lunch & Learn: Planting your spring vegetable ...

Wed, Feb 28 12:00 pm

Learn Special Effects Make Up Artistry!

Wed, Feb 28 10:45 am

Soft Opening: Be the FIRST to try Lucky Axe ...

Wed, Feb 28 12:00 pm

Lunch & Learn: Planting your spring vegetable ...

Wed, Feb 28 12:00 pm

Add Event +

SEE MORE →

MORE FROM AJC.COM

SPORTS →

VIDEO: Watch Miami hit a buzzer beater from the logo to beat UNC

Lawrenceville to buy property at East Crogan and Jackson streets

Marjory Stoneman Douglas students return to class after school shooting: Live updates

NEWS →

Clayton County Water Authority opens fishing season on March 1

FALCONS →

The Bow Tie Chronicles: The Falcons' offense needs some power

NEWS →

Atlanta homeless receive flu vaccinations from Fulton Board of Health